Thank you so much for joining. I really appreciate it, of course. So as I just said, after the interview is done, I'll remove the recording and then I'll transcribe it. As I said, let's see. So today I just want to talk a bit about voice recordings, a little bit more specifically about homesickness, meaningfulness and your perceived personalness or genericness of a voice recording. But just to start off, how are you feeling today?

Oh, I'm okay. Yeah. It's nice. It's nice here. It's not too bad. I have to eat, but we're supposed to get rain. I'm okay. Yeah. Just busy with the dogs. You know me.

Yes, but just a regular day?

Yeah, regular day. Yeah.

And could you tell me where you're originally from?

I'm from Canada. From Canada.

And you grew up there as well?

Yes, I did. I grew up in Canada. I moved to the United States when I was 29. I was a nurse. I worked there for many years and now I live in Greece. Yeah. I'm retired. So yeah.

So you currently live in Greece and what do you consider to be home?

Canada. Newfoundland. Canada. Yeah. Well, I mean, this is home for me now, of course, because I live here and I have the animals here. Yeah. So this is where I live. So I say it's home, but you know, my heart, my birth home is Newfoundland, Canada. Yes. My family are all in Canada. Yeah. So the real, the feeling of home, if you would think about home right now, that goes back to Canada, not Greece. Yeah, more or less. Yeah. It's where my family is. Family is home.

Yeah, exactly. And do you remember a moment in your life when you were maybe most homesick or at least had a lot of homesickness? And when was this? What were you missing?

Oh, yes, yes, yes. When my mother was dying of cancer, I was very homesick. I wanted to be with her. At the time I was living in the States, that was a very difficult time. I was working. It was difficult for me to get away. I did manage to get away a few times to get home, spend time with her. But it was really hard, really hard. Because being the nurse in the family, they depended on me a lot. The family did for support and encouragement and care for my mother. Yeah. And so it was a very difficult time. And, you know, of course, when I went through divorce, well, separation from my husband five years ago, of course, I missed my family even more than because, you know, they love me and they're my support and emotional support.

Yeah. So during the painful moments, mostly you had that homesickness feeling?

Well, I mean, you know, holidays, birthdays, you know, it is what it is, right? I mean, as a nurse, I was always working on the holidays and always having to be on call and things. So being away from family has been a lifelong thing. And, yeah, you miss them, right? But it's difficult to get away. As you know, Jesse, I have a bunch of dogs here. So I have to have someone come stay at the house for me to be able to go back to Canada. And I'm looking into that. Yeah, because I do want to get home. I have another brother just diagnosed with cancer. My sister just had a breast removed for cancer. And so it's difficult, right? I want to get home and spend time with them.

Yeah, yeah, I completely understand. All right, let me go to the next part. So what I want to talk about is how voice recordings sound personal or generic to you. And what I mean by that is the personal audio doesn't necessarily have to originate from someone personally close to you, but it needs to kind of invoke a personal connection. So it could be a linguistic, historical, cultural, in any way, shape or form, but it needs to invoke a personal connection. And on the other hand, a generic voice recording would be one that does not invoke that connection for you. So if you were to think about voice recordings, or maybe any type of audio that mainly consists of a voice. And if you could think of this, what do you think would make it more personal to you? What are the characteristics of that?

As a voice? I mean, just it could be a male or female voice, that doesn't matter. But not a robot voice, not a robotic voice or an accent I don't understand. I prefer for it to be something I can understand and speak slowly and clearly. Because I am older, I'm 63. So I need somebody to speak slowly and clearly. But I don't like robot voices. I don't like, you know, for English, press one. Or, you know, I hate that because you press one, you never get English anyway. So it's a lie.

Yeah, yeah, yeah, exactly.

I hate that. So, yeah, I prefer, I actually prefer to talk to a person as opposed to recording. But if it is recording, I want them to be friendly, polite. Yeah. And, and get back to me in a timely manner and not be just some recording that's in Neverland and, you know, doesn't really care. When they say they're going to return the call, I prefer that they return the call or, you know, or forward me to where I need to be if I press the number to the department I want to be at. Yeah. If it says for English and then you press one and then they send you to someone that says, oh, wait now, you want English? Wait now. And they send you four different, transfer you four different times and then you get hung up on. That makes me crazy.

Yeah. Yeah, I understand.

Is that related to what you're talking about?

Yeah, yeah, it is. And so for, for example, would you think that certain topics maybe feel more personal for you or any other actual insights into the types of voice recordings as opposed to how the voice recording sounds?

Personal? I don't know. I mean, I guess, do you mean like when I call somewhere and I get a voice recording and you get choices to choose from? Is this what we're referring to?

No, it could be very broad. So a voice recording could be anything ranging from someone, you know, sending you a voice recording about anything. It could be a listening book. It could be, it could be many things as long as it would be a voice recording of that thing.

Oh, well, I mean, yeah, if it's a friend or a family, I, yeah, it's nice to be able to record. Like when I do WhatsApp or messenger with my family, it's, we record a lot of times because we like to hear each other's voice. Yeah. It makes it much more personal. And, you know, like I have a little niece who has, has a form of Asperger's, I guess she's painfully shy and stuff. But, you know, when I send her, I try and send her a voicemail and she's always like, oh, she'll send one back. Aunt name, I just love hearing your voice, you know, and it's just very, very sweet. And to me, that's very personal because I know how much she struggles with communication. Yeah. So that's, that's very, very nice. And I like just hear my sister's voice. I never know if it's going to be the last time or my brother's voice, you know, you just don't know. And same thing, you know, I have a funny accent, they laugh or I mispronounce something. Like, you know, I say the dog's got the zombies instead of the zoomies or whatever. And so, yeah, we get a good kick out of it.

Yeah, yeah, I can understand that. And maybe it's a bit of a more difficult question. But could you think of some characteristics that would make a voice recording more generic for you? You also already stated maybe a roboticness in like the tone of voice. So it needs to be human for it to be personal, at least.

Yeah, yeah. I mean, I prefer that. I prefer a human voice compared to a robotic voice. Yeah. Yeah. You know, sorry, my doggy's barking. Hang on one second.

Yeah, that's okay.

Come here, Emma. Yeah, my blind girl. Yeah, so I prefer, I prefer, you know, human, human voice. So. Yeah. Yeah, or doggy voice. No, but you know, it's definitely better. And, you know, you always prefer to talk to the person that you're trying to reach or whatnot. But if not, then like I said, I prefer that it's clear, concise, to the point, you know, not give me a hundred million things and options of if I want this to add to my program or to my, say, for example, this cable TV or Netflix or whatever. And they keep trying to sell you up. I prefer they don't do that. I prefer if I'm calling to pay a bill or a bill inquiry or to update my address or something that they give me those options. I push the button and it actually leads me to the part where I can accomplish that. I don't want my time wasted. I don't want a bunch of offers. Yes. If I want that, I'll ask for it. Exactly.

Yeah. Okay. So what I'm going to do now, and this requires some more technical trial, trial and error, maybe. Okay. You are right now in the Google meeting, of course. I'm going to open the chat in here and I'm going to send you a link with another questionnaire. Which you...

Do I push?

Yeah. So you should have received the message, I think. And you can open the link. And if all goes well, you will still be in the meeting. But you will have a questionnaire.

Okay. So how do I do that then? I just... Right now I just have our pictures. So... Yes. Do I go out of this?

Okay. I'll have a look for you. Yes. So once you're in the questionnaire... Yeah. You can go to the next thing and you'll probably see a statement about someone... About having to rate some voice recordings. Yeah.

There's some... Okay. Let's see. How personal, generic does this feel? Yes. And then... Well, to me it feels personal.

Yes. But what I'm going to do for you is I'm going to let you hear a voice recording.

Oh, okay.

I'm actually going to let you hear five voice recordings. Okay. So the first statement that you see there... Yeah. If everything went correctly, you see a statement there talking about some person speaking in a language that's not entirely fluent for you. It's not really known for you.

Yes. About the weather.

All right. So what I'm going to do is I'm going to let you hear a voice recording that corresponds to that theme.

Okay.

And then you can rate it based on how generic or how personal it feels to you.

Okay.

When you've done that, we're going to go to the next voice recording, which corresponds with the next statement in the questionnaire.

Okay. I see it. Yeah. If I scroll up.

Okay. Very good. Yes. So we're going to do this five times with different voice recordings. And then afterwards, I want you to just keep the questionnaire open. But there's more to fill in, but we'll get back to that later then. So I'm just going to let you hear the voice recording. Please also let me know if it's unclear. You cannot hear it very well. And then you can start rating them whenever you're ready. So just let me know.

Yeah. I'm just going to give her (a dog off screen) a bowl of cookies so she shuts up.

Yes. That's fine.

All right. Okay. I'm sorry. She's old and like me. I'm deaf and blind.

It's all right.

So go ahead.

Yes. All right. I'll let you hear the first one now.

[Voice recording audio: recording 1]

Yes. So you can fill in the rating just based on your own feeling and we can go to the next one whenever you feel like it.

I mean, it's not my language. So... Yeah. Okay. I'll just... I don't know how to really answer it, but I'm going to say generic because I don't understand the word he's saying. Okay. Go ahead.

[Voice recording audio: recording 2]

I don't understand it. So I'm going to say generic. I don't know if that's the right way or not.

Everything is right. There's no right or wrong. So every answer is just okay. Ready for the third one?

All right.

[Voice recording audio: recording 8]

It's personal. It's nice. She's giving some explanation. I like that.

Yeah. Okay. So on to the fourth.

Yes, please.

[Voice recording audio: recording 15]

Okay. All right. Yeah, that's personal. That's my home. Yes.

So you filled in the five items now. Okay. So you can just leave it open the way it is. We'll do this two more times for different characteristics of the recordings.

Do I hit the arrow or no? Just stay where I'm at.

Yeah, you can hit the arrow already. And then you will see a text message that says we will continue with the interview again. Please leave the questionnaire open so you can continue later on in the interview. So you can just leave it open for now, just the way it is.

Okay.

So based on the five recordings that you heard, what characteristics and what elements of the situations made it more or less personal for you?

Well, I guess the cheering on was nice. That was uplifting. And, you know, Happy Canada Day. Yay. That kind of stuff made it upbeat and personal. I can connect with that. I can relate to that. Yeah. And less, I guess, would be, you know, like, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. It's like, you know, flying in the sky and they come on with a French accent and say, we're flying at 2000 feet bla bla. That's how that sounded to me, the first few. So it sounded very generic, like very, like, practiced and same thing. Whereas the other one, the other last two sounded more, what's the word, spontaneous, if that's a good word to describe it.

Yeah

And more, yeah, more and more connection with that. It sounded more spontaneous and real, not like a practice, what's the word I'm looking for? It didn't sound like a script as much as it sounded more personal.

Yeah. Yeah. It was more informal, feels familiar for you?

Exactly. Exactly. Less informal. Yes.

Yeah. All right. So I want to go on to the actual meaningfulness of voice recordings. And it's a little bit of a nuance difference. So it might be a bit difficult to understand. But with meaningfulness, I mean whether a recording feels in any way important or relevant to you. So if it actually resonates with you and to what extent it actually means something to you. This can, of course, be emotionally, but it can also just feel important to you, reminding you of something valuable or significant.

Okay.

And one recording could, for example, be very personal but not that meaningful. But it could also be not that personal and very meaningful.

Okay.

So if you were to think about voice recordings in general again, so any type of recording that could include voice, what do you think would make such a recording meaningful to you?

Yeah. Well, I guess if they respond to you or if they address you by your name or, you know, not a lot of sir and ma'am and miss and stuff. But just say, you know, Miss O'Reilly would be fine or Frankie or Francis or whatever would be fine. That would make it more personal, I guess. Knowing that somebody is actually knowing who they're talking to and not just like random calls that they make, telemarketer calls that they make to everybody. What was the second part of the question?

Yeah. So the question basically was, what do you think are the characteristics of voice recordings that would be meaningful to you?

Meaningful if it has something to do with me. I mean, you know, if it has, if it relates to me. I mean, I don't want to hear about somebody calling me about, I don't know, I don't know what kind of example to give. But if it doesn't, if I can't relate to it, it's like, oh, well, let's just say a neuro, neuro space science or something about aliens or something. And I can't relate to that. That's to me is a bunch of garbage. So something like that would not be personal. If they were to call me about a situation with the dogs or with the crisis with the whales or something that I can relate to that I'm passionate about, then of course that would be more personal to me. Yeah. So, you know, now with everything going on in Ireland, that to me feels personal because I'm part Irish, right? And I watch social media and everything going on. To me, that's personal because I am a woman and I am vulnerable. And I am, you know, originally my ancestors came from there. Yeah. So that to me feels personal, right? Does it make any sense what I'm saying?

Yeah, that does. Yeah, it does make sense. So do you think that, let me see. How do I put this? I just lined up a very nice sentence in my head and the moment I was going to say it, it completely disappeared. But do you think that the meaningfulness of a voice recording or potential meaningfulness, do you think it transcends or it can transcend the relationship of the person that's talking to you? So, for example, if someone close to you talks to you about some topic that appeals to you. So, for example, dogs, of course, that's going to be nice and meaningful to you. Do you think it's the same if a complete stranger would talk to you about a topic that you would like?

No, obviously not, because if somebody I know, I already have that personal connection, right? Yeah. We've already formed a friendship or a connection. So, of course, if it's a total stranger, I would still be interested. Yeah. And I'm still passionate about things that I'm passionate about. But, you know, obviously, if I talk to name about the situation with the dog, I'm more, what's the word? I'm more committed and more in tune and passionate about it because it's her, right? Yeah. As opposed to my topic from a whole different organization that I've never met, that I don't know, never met any of your dogs, for example. Then, of course, it won't be as personal. But with that said, it's still a dog in need. So, that part of it is personal to me. So, it doesn't matter, you know, when it comes down to it, it doesn't matter who I'm talking to. If it's something that I can do to help, then I want to do that. Does that make sense?

Yeah, it does. So, basically, that kind of, do you think that shows a connection for you between the personalness and the meaningfulness in the way that something that's more personal is often more meaningful?

Yeah, I guess so. Exactly. That makes a lot of sense because the meaningfulness is that it's a dog in need. Yeah. That means a lot to me. The personal part is if I know, if I've met this dog or if I know the people that are taken care of. So, I'm just using dogs as an example. But it would be the same for any, I guess, anything that I feel a connection with or I feel that there's something I can do to help or there's a, you know, I have a passion for, I have an opinion about, I have advice to give. Yeah. Or I'm a good listener. Yeah. You know, whatever the case may be, whatever is needed at the time. And sometimes people just need to vent, you know, and I just listen. I don't, I don't choose sides. I don't do, I just listen and I keep, keep it to myself. So, that's one side of it. You know, that's the personal side of it, right? The trust and the friendship. Whereas if it's a total stranger and they're going off on me about, oh, politics and the government of Greece when it comes to animals and stuff. And it's a total stranger that has nothing to do with animals, but they have all these opinions. They don't own a dog. They don't feed them. They don't water them. They don't go and help the strays. But they have all these opinions and big blah, blah, blah, blah, you know. And that, of course, doesn't feel as personal to me. No. I'm still emotional. I'm still, you know, I can still. It's still meaningful. The meaning, yeah, it still means a lot to me. But if it's somebody that's not involved and not, it's not, you know, it's not personal to them, then it's not as meaningful to me. Does that make any sense? Or it's not as personal to me?

Yeah, it does. It totally does.

Yeah. I don't have the time for it. More or less. Like, it's like kind of in one or the other because blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. Yeah. Words without actions. Yeah. No. I fully understand. Yeah. And. To me, it's narcissistic. Everybody has an opinion, but nobody, you know, and they're there quick to criticize the people that are on the ground doing the hard work. Yeah. But, you know, they have their opinion, their criticisms, but they don't fucking lift a finger. Pardon me. They don't lift a finger to scoop a bit of shit or to feed a stray or clean water bowls. You know what I'm saying? That's just putting it as an example. But you know what I mean? That kind of thing.

Yeah.

Same with politics. Yeah. You know, everybody's all, you know, whatever it is, if you're pro-immigrant, if you're anti-immigrant, whatever. But I'll tell you what, when you're, when you're a mother of a seven-year-old girl that's brutally raped by a gang, then that is very meaningful and very personal.

Yeah. Yeah.

You know, and it's easy for people that are in high places in their little glass thrones that have bodyguards and everything else. And they don't live around these. And they don't live around these, but always say, oh, yeah, come, come, come, you know, and give you pay for everything and blah, blah, blah. Yeah. Yeah. But they're totally removed from it, but yet have all the answers. And the poor mother that goes to the media crying and saying, this is not right, blah, blah, blah, blah. Then she's charged or accused of being racist or being, you know, whatever phobia that they want to put to it. That kind of thing. Does that make sense? Is that okay?

Yes. It's okay. In an interview, we can have our own opinions. That kind of keeps the dialogue flowing, right?

Okay. I got off track. Sorry.

No, that's completely okay. Let me see. So I want to go back to the actual questionnaire that we just had open. And I'm going to let you hear the exact same five recordings again.

Do I push the arrow or what do I do now?

Yes, you should press the arrow.

Okay. I'm going to push the arrow. Okay. All right. I'm back to the question.

Okay. Yeah, so it should be the exact same statements, but this time you can rate them based on not being meaningful at all, all the way to very meaningful, depending on what you think. And I'll just let you hear the same five ones. If you think a recording you've heard enough, you can just let me know and I'll go to the next one.

Okay. Yeah. Yeah. All right.

[Voice recording audio: recording 1]

Next one.

[Voice recording audio: recording 2]

If I understood what they were saying. I could answer better, but... Yeah, the linguistical barrier is a bit too. Yeah, I'm just going to say not meaningful, only because I don't understand. I mean, the voice sounds passionate and stuff, but... Okay. All right.

[Voice recording audio: recording 8]

[Voice recording audio: recording 15]

[Voice recording audio: recording 22]

All right. So, based on these recordings, which specific elements for you or which characteristics of the situations affected the meaningfulness and in which way?

Well, the relevance of it, you know, like I said, the first two I couldn't understand. So, to me, they're not relevant. Yeah. But the last ones, of course, I mean, it's the weather. It's in an upbeat tone. She makes it a bit personal. I like that. And, of course, it's a Canadian one. Yeah, you'd be Canada, you know. So, that made it very meaningful. It was a celebration of my birthplace. Yeah. Which is nice and brought me joy, you know. It made me happy.

Yeah, that's good. And for the two French recordings, because you, well, on the linguistical side, you cannot understand them, was there any difference in the rating you gave? Or was there no difference?

Yes, I did. I did give a different rating on it, because I think the first one, I don't know why I did. Maybe I thought into it a bit more, trying to listen to see if I could understand any of it. But, I don't know. I don't know why. I probably is not meaningful. I should have chosen the same answer for both.

No, you don't have to. If your gut says you shouldn't, then you shouldn't.

Okay. That's fine.

Alright, so, I'm going to go on to the actual supportiveness for coping with homesickness now. So, with that, I mean... Okay, one second. Okay. Alright. Alright. So, with the supportiveness, I mean whether you feel like the voice recording could actually alleviate your feeling of homesickness and to what extent, or it could potentially worsen your homesickness and to what extent. And, so, if you were to think about voice recordings once again, just in general, what do you think would be types of voice recordings or characteristics thereof that would impact that alleviation or potentially worsen the homesickness?

Oh, worsen the homesickness. Oh, I don't know how to answer that, really. I guess if it's my, if it's like about Canada, it'll probably have mixed feelings, if that makes sense. It's just like, yes, I love my country, but it's more family for me, right? So, it's nice. Yeah. Like, you know, Canada, celebrating it, you know, yay, Canada. That's one thing. And, yes, I'm proud of my heritage and my birthplace. And Canada is a beautiful country. It's a wonderful country. They haven't learned it yet. They're trying, the governments. But at any rate, but if it's something that pertains to my family members or to Newfoundland, for example, you know, it's a story about the fishing industry or the seal hunt or the climate or, you know, what have you in the oil, the offshore oil rates and stuff. Anything that has, then that's more specific and more meaningful to me, more personal.

Yeah, I understand. And the fact that it's more personal, then does that make the homesickness better, if you would listen to it, do you think? Or does it make it worse? Because you said it's kind of a two-way street?

It is. I mean, because I, you know, yes, it makes me homesick in a way, but in the same token, is that I can't live there now. I know I can't live there because my life is here. Yeah. You know, the dogs are here. My life is here right now. And the other thing is, I couldn't afford to live back in Canada. You know, I'm on a pension. I'm a pensioner. So right now, it's like, this is what I can afford. And live a comfortable, you know, live relatively comfortable.

Yeah. And if you were to just imagine you did have the financial or you didn't have the financial burden of not being able to move back. So you could just move freely if you wanted. Do you think you would or not?

I think I would do, I think I would live part-time here, part-time there. Yeah. To be honest. Do my summers there, you know, like probably May to September. Yeah. And definitely winter here.

Yeah, exactly.

Because the weather's nicer. And food is cheap, you know, it's better quality. Because Newfoundland is an island. Everything they get is imported or grown in a hothouse. And that's just one aspect of the food. You know, the ocean's nice. The lifestyle's nice. But Newfoundland is also very beautiful. Because it's very laid back and there's a lot of wilderness, a lot of wildlife. You know, I love going camping when I'm there, for example. I love going, you know, up the river to the depot on the boats and stuff. Because that's how I grew up. That's what we did. So, to me, that's well-timed, well-spent with family as well.

Yeah. All right. I'm going to let you hear the recordings one more time. Yeah. And then you can go back to the questionnaire now.

Okay. So, I just push the arrow?

Yeah. You can push the arrow. You'll eventually end up at the same set of statements again. And they will ask you to rate it based on not being supportive at all. All the way to being very supportive for coping with homesickness. So, just based on what you think again. And just tell me when I can continue to a next recording if you want to.

[Voice recording audio: recording 1]

[Voice recording audio: recording 2]

[Voice recording audio: recording 8]

[Voice recording audio: recording 15]

And the final one

[Voice recording audio: recording 22]

So which elements did you think this time um did you think of the situations uh that affected your extent to which it supports the homesickness coping, so what do you think made it worse or made it better?

Uh well the the two french ones of course you know french, my mother was french but they made them change back to english and even the names they had to change from a french name to an english name back back in the time so yeah and the french are a bit pompous i'm sorry in canada they think that they're better than the rest of the canadians so yeah i don't really relate that much i've been to montreal i've driven through to quebec and stuff um and i think you know to to to enforce both languages and things of that nature you know if the main language is english then you know it's great speak french i love having multiple languages and stuff but it shouldn't be forced on people's throats yeah

And about the three canadian uh english ones um which one do you think was the most supportive for you for coping or which one would be?

I think the weather one, yeah i think that one that one was very well done i could i could actually picture myself there um and actually see the clouds and see you know i mean it was it was more personal it was yeah i could relate more to that one for some reason

And was that do you think only uh geographical? Or was that uh also in the way that was that they talked or the what they were talking about?

I think both i think a little of both because i know you know i know halifax have been halifax and you know and charlotte and yeah yeah st john's so it covered a big broad area of the maritime provinces where it's like we're all part of that little group there uh not group but it's uh it's different the maritimes are definitely different than the western part, like Vancouver, Alberta those are different lifestyles and different uh not cultures but different they're different yeah different than the maritimes you know so, the good old boys

I understand yeah

Um because it's oil it's oil industry and gas and things of that nature uh tech tech and, then it's the fishing industry, the seal hunt the you know

Yeah, um that brings us almost to the end so finally i want to uh let you imagine that someone very close to you could be anyone that you think is close to you they're speaking to you directly about something personal something that's very personal to you. Um, if you were to have a recording of that or maybe you have a specific one of that um how meaningful do you think that would be and how supportive for coping with homesickness do you think it would be?

Oh it would be very meaningful and very supportive like you know like when i listen if i miss a call from my sister and she leaves a voice message for an example or my brother uh or you know in my my um family um it's very meaningful and very supportive i feel through their reporting i feel their love their support um means a lot to me it means everything family's everything yeah and uh yeah even if it's just a recording like i said through the voice and through the uh airwaves or whatever however it comes across um yeah i can still feel their strength their love their compassion yeah um their genuine interest in me and for my well-being. It's not a just a, yeah how are you today blah blah blah, it's personal

It's not that superficial?

Right so hey, my sis, how are you? You know and the voices you can hear, the love it's not it's not uh scripted or just blah blah blah it's, you know, it's personal. Yes, my sister talking to me or my brother talking to me, hey sis, you know?

And do you think that the earlier concept that you kind of uh stated with it being maybe a double the double way street um do you think it could also have a negative effect on the homesickness the same recording?

You mean uh if it's from a family member if it could be have a negative? No no, it's usually positive for me. It's usually positive, I mean yeah of course it makes me homesick of course it makes me miss them more you know. They're my home, family is my home.

Yeah exactly

Yeah it's not the location, I mean i've had my sister here in Greece a couple times then my other sister and her husband came this year, it's the first time I've had a different family member come to visit, yeah, so uh that's great but you know they're home and they're there so..

Yeah

And when I do get the visit it's like i'm going home, because i'm going to family it's not so much the rock itself i mean, yes beautiful and brings back memories and stuff, but i don't you know it's not like childhood friends or any of that it's family. And a lot of them are gone unfortunately so yeah it's difficult when i do go home i miss i miss my family members that have passed, my mother and my brothers, so..

I really understand yeah. Um just just um by the way you can submit the questionnaire if you want

Okay so I hit the arrow?

Yeah you can hit the arrow and then you'll eventually see a screen saying it's been recorded and then it's done. Then i should perceive your response in a couple minutes

Okay

So is there anything that you uh kind of came up with in your head maybe that you still wanted to share about this?

No, I hope it's helpful for you, I'm doing this for you

Yes anything is helpful uh and i uh i think it definitely is yeah and you can..

Yeah when it comes to homesickness and stuff it is a personal thing but like i think i hope i explained it enough that home is family, definitely doesn't matter the geographical location yeah um, it's my family so That's great yeah. I'm just going to pause the recording now.
